The Peony

To make more real our slogan—"EVERYTHING THAT IS GOOD AND HARDY"—we have purchased the entire stock of Peonies from that life-long enthusiast and specialist, Mr. E. A. Reeves, of Chagrin Falls, Ohio.

This stock of 100,000 plants includes the Gold Medal Collection with which he took many prizes.

As we have to move this stock to our nursery this Fall, we are making very special prices to dispose of our surplus.

If June had done nothing but give us roses it would have been enough to have immortalized it as the Flower Month. But Nature is lavish of her gifts to the limit of prodigality. It would take more than a page to even mention the names of the flowers that bloom in June, and it is our purpose here to mention but one.

The Peony is a close rival of the rose, either for planting or for cutting. Its iron-clad hardness, adaptability to varying soils and locations, its wealth of bloom, richness of fragrance, and variety of color, all go to make it a general favorite. So we find it in a single clump by the cottage door or in pleasing variety in the flower garden; in costly and rare varieties in the grounds of the collector, and in extensive plantings in parks and in the grounds of the wealthy.

The plant we send out is a strong, healthy, three- to five-eye plant, not the small two- to three-eye division often sold and which we believe is too small to give satisfaction. Our plants will often throw one or two good blooms the first season.

For more immediate effect we advise the five- to nine-eye, three-year clump, or still better the ten- to fifteen-eye, four-year clump.

September and October are the best months in which to plant Peonies, although they are planted fairly satisfactorily in March or early April. In planting, cover the "eyes" with about two inches of soil and use a slight mulch. Too deep planting is the cause of many Peonies not blooming. Fertilize with bone-meal, wood ashes and sparingly with stable manure.

The figure on the margin is the rating given by the Peony Society, using ten (10) as a perfect Peony.

You will note that we are listing only about fifty of the best kinds, making a good concise list which we believe will fill all of your requirements. However, we have a great many other varieties and would be glad to quote you on any special variety you may want.

Prices are for three- to five-eye plants. Five- to nine-eye, three-year clumps for twice the price.

Ten- to fifteen-eye, four-year clumps for three times the price.

The Iris

The Iris has justly been called the "Poor Man's Orchid." In curious shapes, in richness and variety of colorings it is in close rivalry with that exquisite aristocrat among flowers, and what makes it more popular and valuable is that it requires none of the professional care and coddling which the orchid must have.

Varieties can be selected which will grow in almost any kind of soil possessing a fair degree of fertility. Of course, the better the soil, the more satisfactory will be the results.

Fertilize sparingly with bone meal. Stable manure is injurious.

The Japanese Iris thrive much better in fairly heavy soil and a wet location. In planting barely cover to the crown with soil.

Our block was a gorgeous sight this year with one sheet of bloom nearly four feet high.
